Dear Rt. Hon. Kabayo Grace,

I write with a heart full of gratitude and with my sincerest apologies for not having been in touch sooner following the exceptional kindness and warm hospitality you and your team so graciously extended to me during my recent visit to Uganda.

Please forgive my prolonged silence. On my return to England from Uganda, I was laid low by a severe bout of flu. Before I had fully recovered, I travelled to Ile-Ife, Nigeria, for the Olojo Festival, where His Imperial Majesty, the Ooni of Ife, and his gracious wife, Queen Ashley, generously hosted me and my entourage. I then returned to a considerable backlog of cases in my legal practice and completed a long-postponed professional accreditation in Family Law. Barely a day later, I was back in Uganda, where my body finally demanded the rest I had so long denied it, and I regret that even then I did not write to you as I should have.

Whilst these circumstances may explain my delay, I recognise that they do not excuse my failure to communicate sooner, particularly when your kindness and generosity have remained so firmly in my thoughts. I therefore ask for your gracious understanding and forgiveness.

More importantly, I wish to express my profound appreciation for the warmth, generosity of spirit and genuine kindness with which you and your team received me. Your hospitality was far more than a gracious welcome; it was a gesture of friendship and goodwill that touched me deeply and left an enduring impression. I remain truly grateful for the thoughtfulness you showed me, the gifts you bestowed upon me, and all that you did to make my visit so memorable.

I pray that Almighty God will continue to bless, protect and strengthen you, granting you wisdom, good health and the fortitude to fulfil the noble responsibilities He has entrusted to you. May He enlarge your influence for good and reward your service to your nation, to African women and to the wider African family.

It is my sincere hope that, when the opportunity arises for you to visit England, I may have the privilege of reciprocating, in some measure, the kindness you so generously extended to me. Beyond this, I earnestly look forward to the prospect of our working together in the future, united by our shared commitment to a greater purpose: advancing the cause of African women, strengthening our cultural and institutional bonds, and contributing meaningfully to the development and empowerment of our people.

I believe that some encounters are divinely ordained, and I am grateful that our paths have crossed. May this be the beginning of a lasting friendship and a fruitful partnership in the service of the mission that God has placed before us.

Please accept, once again, my heartfelt thanks, my sincere apologies for my delayed correspondence, and my deepest appreciation for everything you and your team have done for me. Your kindness will not be forgotten.

With profound respect, warmest regards and prayers for God's continued blessings upon you.

Yours sincerely and affectionately,

Queen Aruk II
